Aloha Friend --

My dad knows how quickly technology is changing every industry, and is determined to position Hawai'i at the forefront of this change. He has inspired me in countless ways, but one of the most important is his influence on my career. He studied electrical engineering at the University of Hawai'i at Manoa -- and I followed in his footsteps by earning a degree in computer science. As someone who works in the technology sector as a software engineer, I recognize how influential his policies have been for growing Hawai'i's tech industries and making them sustainable.

In February, my dad passed an executive order to maintain net neutrality in Hawai'i. Net neutrality guarantees equal access to the Internet and prevents ISPs from throttling speeds on sites they don't favor. This protection is vital to Hawai'i's many small businesses and to the general public. Throughout my career, I have seen the importance of an open and impartial Internet, and I am proud of my dad for taking strong actions to protect Hawai'i's citizens.

My dad also pioneered better broadband capacity to ensure we have the best environment for economic growth, he signed "paperless" legislation to improve government transparency, and he enacted a requirement that all Hawai'i high schools provide computer science curricula. He is truly committed to making Hawai'i the most innovative state in the nation.

"I have seen the importance of an open and impartial Internet, and I am proud of my dad for taking strong actions to protect Hawai'i's citizens." Matt Ige

Can we count on your help to further enhance Hawai'i's technology industry? By donating as little as $5 you can make a tremendous difference towards my dad's goal of improving technology in Hawai'i.
