Aloha Friend,

Even The New York Times sees how special this campaign is as it really is a people's campaign.
Check out what the paper reported Sunday:

Mr. Abercrombie's primary opponent is David Ige, a longtime member of the State Senate. In a poll released this month by Honolulu Civil Beat, an online news organization, Mr. Ige led Mr. Abercrombie 48 percent to 37 percent, a particularly stunning result, given that the governor's spending on television advertising had dwarfed that of Mr. Ige. The news organization said it had been so surprised to find Mr. Ige with a double-digit lead when it first polled in May that it polled again in June.

As the article noted, we are being heavily outspent and we are STILL WINNING. Please keep up your hard work to get David elected because we all know Hawaii deserves better.

Donate $25 today, and let's make sure we make the front page of The New York Times on August 9!
