Aloha,

Early this morning, texting began among our team sharing the great news that David was endorsed by the Honolulu Star-Advertiser.

The endorsement mentions David's action plan, "Engineering Hawaii's Future", and highlights David's responsible approach to balancing our state budget, supporting business growth through targeted tax credits, and improving education for our children by getting resources directly to each school's leaders.

The paper's editorial board also described David as "a conciliator, one who has deep working relationships with lawmakers who can bring plans to fruition" – a reference to David's 29-year history of building consensus within the state Legislature.

We have come such a long way since David announced his candidacy on July 9, 2013 and it is gratifying that a major newspaper has recognized what we've always known – David Ige is truly the leader that Hawaii needs.

But he can only become our governor if we all get out and actually vote for him – through absentee ballot, walk-in voting, or at the polls on Tuesday, November 4.

Please remind your family, friends, neighbors and co-workers to vote. If you know someone who is homebound, please offer to give them a ride to their polling place.

To a Better Future for Our Children and Grandchildren,

Keith Hiraoka
