Aloha Friend,

Memorial Day allows us a special time to honor those who fought and gave their lives to protect our freedoms. There is no greater contribution a state can make than to give the nation the lives of its own, and since the close of World War II, Hawai'i has sent a larger share of its sons and daughters into conflict than any other state.

Hawai'i's veteran population, including their immediate families, represent about one quarter of Hawaii's population, an indication of just how important the ties between Hawaii, the military and its veterans are.

We remember those who gave their lives for us, and we reflect on the high cost of our freedoms

One way we can honor those who made the ultimate sacrifice is by caring for their brethren in service to our country. That's why Governor Ige has worked tirelessly to ensure our veterans are honored and receive the support they need.

As we honor and grieve for our fallen friends and family members, and for all those who sacrificed their lives for our country, let us also think what we can do to respect and care for all those who serve.

Mahalo,

Team David Ige
