Aloha Friend,

Earth Day was first established in 1970, when nearly 20 million Americans came together demanding basic protections to preserve our planet for future generations. The powerful grassroots effort received astonishing support which led to national legislation including the Clean Air Act and the Clean Water Act, and is celebrated in more than 193 countries each year.

Today, we continue to build on the progress made and Governor Ige has been at the forefront with laws that protect our planet. He approved a state law that enabled Hawai'i to join the rest of the world and agree to abide by the Paris Climate Agreement shortly after President Trump pulled out. He has advanced a state policy that by year 2045, 100% of the electricity generated in Hawai'i should come from renewable energy resources.

Governor Ige knows that everyone must do their part in protecting the one planet we have for future generations. We need his continued leadership to build a safer, stable, and sustainable world.

Mahalo,
