Aloha Friend,

The health and safety of our families, friends, fellow citizens and visitors takes precedence in every situation, and particularly during times of natural disasters. I ask that my supporters focus on taking care of yourselves and your families by preparing for the possible impact of Hurricanes Iselle and Julio.

Please ensure any campaign yard signs or banners are put away or secured over the next few days.

On primary election day, should Oahu escape the brunt of Iselle, we plan a gathering at our campaign headquarters to watch the local news media reports of the election results. As much as we would love your company, please exercise caution and "if in doubt, don't go out."

Please stay linked to us through these emails, our Facebook page, or website for ongoing updates.

Mahalo for your support and following the advice of our Hawai'i State Civil Defense department over the next few days.

David Ige
